ASI Acquires Eutrobac, Expanding Its Portfolio with the NutriFilter™ Technology

Strategic acquisition adds proven nitrogen management and struvite prevention technology to ASI's industry-leading product line

NORTH CAROLINA — Agriment Services, Inc. (ASI) and Eutrobac, Inc. today announced that ASI has agreed to acquire Eutrobac, a technology and manufacturing company headquartered in New York, NY. The acquisition brings to ASI a five-year body of research, proprietary techniques, and an intellectual property portfolio built around Eutrobac's novel NutriFilter™ technology.

The NutriFilter™ has demonstrated a unique and flexible capacity to rapidly remove ammonium and, where required, total nitrogen from lagoon systems. The technology has also shown a measurable ability to prevent struvite formation through strategic placement on swine and livestock operations — a chronic and costly operational challenge for producers across the country.

“Our acquisition of Eutrobac is a tremendous opportunity to provide value to our clients across North Carolina and the country. The NutriFilter™ will help our clients dramatically reduce degradation of metals in hog barns, manage nitrogen and phosphorus loads, and stop struvite before it becomes an issue.”

— Ronnie “Geno” Kennedy, President, Agriment Services, Inc.

As part of the acquisition, Eutrobac's co-founders will assume new roles within ASI. Ellie Sangree will join the company on a consulting basis, supporting the continued development and deployment of Eutrobac's technologies. Jesse Wexler will join Agriment Services, Inc. full time as Vice President of Sales and Marketing.

“I'm really excited to join ASI. Over the last 32 years, Geno and his team have built an incredible reputation in their ability to consistently deliver excellence across their product line and service offerings. I'm focused on leveraging ASI's infrastructure, know-how, and reputation to grow their business across North America.”

— Jesse Wexler, Vice President of Sales and Marketing, Agriment Services, Inc.

“We're buying Eutrobac not just for their technology, but for their people as well. We are confident that Jesse and Ellie represent the future of our industry, and we're proud to have them as a part of our team.”

— Ronnie “Geno” Kennedy, President, Agriment Services, Inc.

The NutriFilter™ and ASI's full line of products are available through Hog Slat, QC Supply Company, and Farmer Boy AG.
